Bespoke style. Lower price

Head-turning high-end interiors don't have to demand a huge budget. If you're looking to spend less without cutting corners, combining bespoke fronts with proprietary cabinetry can be a highly cost-effective way of specifying kitchens and joinery throughout the home.

HØLTE kitchens offer the quality and aesthetics of custom joinery but typically cost a third of the price of a bespoke equivalent – a significant saving that could be put towards more architecturally impactful areas of the build.

INFORMATION FOR ARCHITECTS & DESIGNERS

Decades in design and detailing

Over many years, we have developed wide-ranging knowledge and experience in the design and build of bespoke kitchens, resulting in our comprehensive design service using the HØLTE kitchen system.

We have built a team of creative, experienced and highly qualified designers with multidisciplinary backgrounds, ranging from architecture to furniture design and fashion.

Streamlined system. Flexible service

Detailed kitchen design can be a time-consuming and frustrating process for architects and interior designers, especially when the layout is a client priority. Over the years we have established a range of systems to streamline the process.

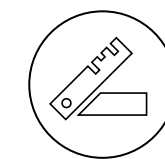

We understand construction procurement and, thanks to our flexible scope and tailored service, can be appointed to help with your project in various ways.

The HØLTE process

We can begin with the architect's or designer's design-intent layout in combination with a material palette, or work from detailed plans. The HØLTE system can translate these into bespoke specifications or IKEA/Howdens layouts as required.

Typical deliverables might include:

- Detailed layout options
 - 2D plan and elevations
 - Renders of colour options
 - 2D colour elevations
 - Revisions as required
 - Full order list of cabinetry required

HØLTE Fronts
